

CONFLICT OF INTEREST RULES

In-service Conflict of Interest Rules

1. Don't benefit self, spouse or child

Public servants should not use their positions to directly or indirectly benefit themselves, their spouse or children.

2. Don't disclose confidential information

Public servants should not disclose or use any confidential information without authorization.

3. Don't accept gifts

Public servants should not accept gifts from anyone who (1) receives services from (2) does business with or (3) wants to do business with the Ontario government. Public servants may be able to accept gifts of nominal values that are given as an expression of courtesy or hospitality.

4. Don't give preferential treatment

Public servants should not give preferential treatment and should take steps to avoid creating the appearance that such treatment is being given.

5. Don't hire or supervise family members

Public servants should not hire, supervise, or enter into contracts with their spouses, children, parents, brothers or sisters.

6. Declare financial interests

Some public servants may have to disclose their financial interests to the Integrity Commissioner and may be prohibited from acquiring financial interests related to their duties as public servants.

7. Consider conflicts with outside activity

Public servants should not engage in activities (including business, employment or volunteer) outside their public servant roles if doing so would influence or conflict with their duties as public servants.

8. Consider conflicts when participating in decisions

Public servants should disclose if they could benefit from a decision and may not be permitted to participate in the decision-making process, including providing advice or voting.

Post-service Conflicts of Interest Rules

Don't seek preferential treatment

Former public servants must not seek preferential treatment from existing public servants.

Don't disclose confidential information

Former public servants are not allowed to disclose confidential information without authorization or use confidential information for personal benefit.

Don't switch sides

Former public servants who advised a ministry or public body on a proceeding, negotiation, or other transaction cannot provide advice or otherwise assist others on that matter after they cease to be public servant.

Additional Senior Level Restrictions

Former public servants who held designated senior positions may be restricted from accepting employment with certain entities or from lobbying the Ontario government for 12 months after they cease to be public servants.
